Mid-Century Compass Desk by Robin Day with Zinc Top and Beech Legs, 1950s

DESCRIPTION

This midcentury desk is designed by renowned designer Robin Day, known for his contributions to modern furniture design. The desk is characterized by its sleek and minimalist aesthetic, featuring a zinc top that adds a touch of industrial flair. The beech legs are a warm contrast to the metallic top, providing a harmonious balance to the overall design. This desk measures 140cm in length, 80cm in width, and 70cm in height, making it a perfect addition to any modern office or workspace. This desk has been given a fresh update with the addition of a zinc top. The zinc top adds a modern industrial touch to the original formica top, making this piece truly one of a kind. This desk is not only a stylish addition to any office or workspace, but also a testament to the timeless design of Robin Day.
